

Eric Michel
Business Development
Executive

Eric joined Simione Healthcare Consultants in 2019 to support strategic growth as a Business Development Executive. He has more than 10 years of experience in business development, financial and project management in delivering technology solutions for home-based care. Based in Missouri, he supports clients in home health, hospice and private duty care to deliver Simione's many solutions for clinical and financial business improvement.

Eric began his career in home-based care in 2005 with McKesson Corporation, where he managed progressive responsibilities as a consultant, account executive and project manager, and developed a strong background in software implementation, project management, team development, sales management, and client support in the areas of finance and accounting. He also has experience as a small business owner with a focus on business development, sales, and contract management.

Eric earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from Evangel University, Springfield, Missouri, and is pursuing graduate studies in business, finance and marketing.
